

Soviet Warns Against Pressure By U. S. for Debts Settlement

MOSCOW, April 8.—(AP)—A warning that if the United States, through passage of the Johnson bill, hopes to exert pressure upon the Soviet Union to settle debts to America it would be a "hopeless undertaking" was sounded tonight by a source close to official Soviet quarters.

"I remind you that such pressure has been attempted before by other governments when we were not so strong as we are now, and they all failed," this source said in an interview.

He reiterated that the Soviet government does not consider itself a debtor in view of the fact that it has counter claims against America on account of the occupation of Manchuria, Siberia, during United States intervention after the World War.

The spokesman added that "if, indeed, the Johnson bill means that so long as debt settlement is pending no credit, that is to say no trade, can be extended to the Soviet Union, then we consider it very regrettable that after recognition there is no progress, but on the contrary a setback in economic relations between the two countries."

The spokesman refused to say whether the Soviet government had any intention of taking up the question of debt settlement with Washington, and when asked directly whether that question had been touched upon in negotiations prior to recognition, he replied:

"The Soviet government did not refuse to discuss outstanding business in the recognition talks."

Asserting in effect that the Soviet Union can get along without No. 133 can goods if necessary, he added, "You must remember that other governments have also tried to complicate trade intercourse with us in an effort to force debt settlements, and they did not succeed at a time when we were more dependent upon world economy than we are now."

"It does not follow that we wish to halt all our imports. On the contrary, we want to increase our trade. But it also must be borne in mind that our need for foreign imports is not so urgent now as in the past."

2 Slightly Injured In N. C. Train Wreck

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 8.—(AP)—The engine and seven cars of Southern railway passenger train No. 133 were derailed at Harrisburg, 14 miles north of here, tonight upon striking a coal tender which broke away from train No. 32 on a parallel track and careened into its path.

MINES IN ALABAMA WILL TRY REOPENING

Question of How Many Will Report for Work Is Unanswered.

The old wage and hour agreement, $3.40 a day for inside and $2.40 for outside workers, and a 40 hour week was included in the agreement drafted March 16, to end a four-week strike involving 10,000 miners.

Meanwhile, operators through advertisements were charging the leveling out of wage differentials was a movement on the part of some industrialists in the north to abolish the differential and eliminate southern competition in industry.

Donald Comer, Birmingham textile operator, saw in the movement the end of southern industry and a return of the south to agriculture alone, devoted largely to cotton for competition with the Hindu-raised stable.

COAL OPERATORS SCORE MINIMUM WAGE ORDER

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—widely-scattered states tonight shaped new attacks on Recovery Administration Hugh S. Johnson's order establishing a seven-hour day and new minimum wage rates for the industry.

The criticism will be presented tomorrow at NRA hearings on revision of the bituminous coal code.

Among the groups demanding changes are:

Northern West Virginia operators, who insist that removal of the 24-cent wage differential they have enjoyed for years over western Pennsylvania is wrecking the industry in their section.

Alabama operators, who already have obtained a temporary court injunction against the new wage schedule.

Western Kentucky operators, who are demanding a greater wage differential under Indiana and Illinois.

Tennessee operators, also demanding a greater differential.

Smokeseekers operators of southern West Virginia, battling for a revision of their piece rates, which they contend are too high in relation to basic daily rates.

The Progressive Miners of America, a rival of the United Mine Workers, who are seeking greater recognition and may claim exemption from the shorter day.

Fertilizers With More Calcium Is Needed for Soils of Georgia

By E. C. WESTBROOK.
(Cotton and Tobacco Specialist of the University of Georgia System.)

ATHENS, Ga., April 8.—(AP)—More calcium is needed in Georgia soils and where it is practical to use fertilizer materials which contain calcium this should be done.

Calcium may not be considered a rare fertilizer element, yet only a small percentage of our farmers attach enough importance to apply it to the land. Many of our soils are greatly deficient in this element and can be made to produce maximum yields only when applications are made to the soils.

Many of our soils are acid, and therefore do not furnish the most desirable home for our major crops. Calcium or lime sweetens the soil, making it more desirable for soil bacteria which are beneficial to many crops.

Some of the characteristic effects on plant growth, where there is a deficiency of calcium, are very noticeable in specialized crops such as tobacco. In some experiments made by F. E. McCurtain Jr., the tobacco leaves in the bud hooked downward at their tips. When the calcium was left out entirely the bud leaves died. In the field the tobacco plants, where there was a deficiency of calcium, were abnormally dark green in color and the leaves were somewhat thickened as the result of the application of small amounts of manganous sulphate.

Workers and several groups of northern operators. They regard its promulgation as one of the greatest victories yet won in the direction of eventual complete elimination of low wage areas for the south.

Fred A. Kraft, spokesman of the northern West Virginia operators, said today his group was ready for a last-ditch battle with the hearing to regain the 24-cent differential.

LABOR TROUBLES AGAIN RESET AUTO INDUSTRY

DETROIT, April 8.—(AP)—Facing with two strikes and a definite threat of another next Thursday, members of the national automobile labor board held a conference, but no formal session today, in an effort to bring peace in the automotive industry.

No definite report of progress came from Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the board.

Employees of the Motor Products Corporation, where an estimated 1,000 men struck last week, forcing a suspension of work by 4,000 other workers, considered an offer of settlement made by the employers in a closed meeting, but unofficial reports that came from that meeting were not optimistic.

Motor Products makes parts for automobiles in Buffalo, Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha and Detroit.

Dr. Wolman and his fellow board members, Nicholas Kelley, representing the automobile manufacturers, and Richard L. Byrd, representing labor, continued their efforts to settle a strike in the Nash Motors Company plants in Kenosha and Racine, and in the Affiliated Sedan Body Company, in Milwaukee. That strike was believed settled late last week, but those hopes were blasted Saturday by an adverse vote on the terms by representative employees.

Matthew J. Smith, general secretary of the Mechanics' Educational Society of America, an organization of tool and die makers, announced that he would be on duty with representatives of 60 Detroit job manufacturers in an effort to avert a strike that has been urged to start Thursday.

The tool and die makers, who are not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, voted yesterday to strike at midnight Thursday if no agreement is reached on demands for a 20 per cent wage increase. About the only cheer for the labor board in this

Palmetto, Ga., when their automobile blew a tire and overturned. Mrs. Gannon suffered a badly injured shoulder and her husband and daughters were cut and bruised.

The family were on their way to Columbus, Ga., to spend the day. They were treated at the scene of the accident and later in the day were returned to their home.

Mrs. N. L. Gordon, 29, of 1335 Memorial drive, was treated for severe cuts suffered at about 6 o'clock on the Mayson-Turner road near the city when her automobile collided with the car of H. L. Ginn, whose car was not insured.

Gordon told a policeman at Grady hospital that wet pavements caused Mr. Ginn's car to skid and strike her car. Her automobile was said to have been badly damaged.

Miss Nina Hammock, 29, of 8 Bowen street, and Mrs. J. B. Stewart, 26, of 301 Clifton road, were treated at Grady for minor cuts suffered when their car was sideswiped by a car that failed to stop after the accident.

They were treated at Grady and sent to their homes.

Marietta Bombings in '23 Recalled As Deraney Case Trial Approaches

Morris Pack and Martin Love, of Washington, D. C., who allegedly enticed two widely known Syrian merchants to their quarters in a fashionable apartment house several weeks ago, drugged them and robbed them of $8,500, are docketed for trial in Fulton superior court beginning tomorrow morning before Judge E. B. Fomroy.

Mike Deraney and Charles Deraney, two of three brothers who have operated mercantile stores in Marietta and other Georgia cities, are the complainants. They charge that Pack and Love unfolded a grandiose scheme for creating wealth and then absconded with their money after putting knockout drops in their drinks.

The Deraney brothers were widely known in Marietta in 1923, where they figured in a bombing incident that had international complications. The increase in the number of Syrian families in Marietta and their acquisition of desirable Marietta property resulted in dissatisfaction on the part of several residents. The Deraney brothers were warned to members of the Syrian colony were heard. Hard feeling between the contesting elements came to a head on the night of December 28, 1922, in the bombing of the Deraney home on Atlanta street. None was injured but the porch of the house was blown off.

At a public meeting held in the Cobb county courthouse several days afterward, the bombing was characterized as an outrage by many leading citizens, including judges and other law enforcement officers and preachers.

The French embassy at Washington took cognizance of the affair, France at that time having a protectorate over Assyria. Officials of the American state department interested themselves to the degree of inquiring of Georgia authorities whether protection would be afforded the colony and the then Governor Hardwick was assured by the mayor of Marietta that such protection would be afforded. Shortly thereafter the Deraney brothers became involved in an argument with a brother-in-law of the family, Mike Jesus, over possession of an automobile, and after appearing in court and further warnings to the colony from townspeople they disposed of their real estate holdings and left the city.

Members of the family operated mercantile stores in Griffin, Jackson and Jonesboro at various times, but had not been accorded public notice until they reported the theft of $9,500 by two men they described as professional deceivers.

EARLY HOUSE VOTE ON INFLATION PLAN BELIEVED CERTAIN

their debts a chance to refinance them for three per cent.

"If I have a $10,000 mortgage on my farm now, the farm credit administration can lend me but 50 per cent of the farm's value, and I pay five or six per cent interest on that," he said.

"Then I have to borrow an additional $5,000 from some other source and pay even higher interest charges. And the farm credit administration makes service charges that would require me to pay back around 10-12 per cent of the loan the first year."

"Under the present law, if I have a $10,000 mortgage, the government through the farm credit administration can advance me a loan of 100 per cent of the value of my property."

"It will be that way pay off my old mortgage and give me a new one on which my payments would amount to $300 a year for not more than 47 years. I would be paying one and one-half per cent interest on the loan and one and one-half per cent of the principal."

"At the end of 47 years I would have paid the government $14,100 on a $10,000 loan. The result would be that besides helping farmers retain their property, the government would make a net profit of $8,345,000,000 in the 47 years."

"And it would put much-needed new currency into circulation."

In expressing doubt that the house would pass the bill, Byrns said he understood, however, that about half of the discharge petition's signers were Democrats.

To pass the house, the bill would need 217 votes, 72 more than the number required to make a discharge petition effective.

Bullets Make Pattern.

Police said that two of the bullets entered the right chest and the other two the left chest, each of the holes being about two or three inches apart.

By the side of Galis' body police found the heavy butt end of a pistol, which was apparently sawed off for use as a club. The man was lying on his left side, with a trail of blood from the wound in the chest to the store leading to the body, police said.

Coroner Paul Doneoh, notified of the tragedy, said that an inquest probably will be held this morning at the funeral home of J. Austin Dillon, where Galis' body was taken.

Police were called to the scene shortly after 5:30 o'clock Sunday morning. In the store they found a small amount of whiskey, in addition to the .32-caliber revolver. At Dillon's, it was said that the bullet holes corresponded approximately in size to a .32-caliber bullet, and that the bullets stopped inside of the chest.

120 BOLIVIANS DIE AS CADETS REVOLT

Chaco War Discontent Listed as Belated Report Reveals Disorders.

LIMA, Peru, April 8.—(AP)—A dispatch to the newspaper El Comercio from Puno, Peruvian port on Lake Titicaca, near the Bolivian boundary, today said 120 Bolivians were killed and several hundred wounded in a revolt of military cadets at La Paz, capital of Bolivia, last Thursday.

(Dispatches from La Paz last week said two women, caught in cross-fire on a street, were the only victims of the disorder.)

The revolt was suppressed. The El Comercio's correspondent said court-martials speedily condemned several leaders of the rebellion and they were executed a few hours later.

"Confirming the Bolivian revolt," the Puno correspondent said, "it was learned here, despite strict censorship that at dawn Thursday military school cadets surprisingly attacked and seized police barracks, also the army's headquarters, helped by recruits."

The actual fight started at 11 a. m. Thursday when carabinieri attacked the rebels, resulting in 120 killed and several hundred wounded. General Lanza intervened and the rebels surrendered at noon.

"Revolt leaders were court-martialed immediately," the dispatch continued, "were sentenced to capital punishment and were executed by firing squads at 3 p. m."

"It was learned that popular discontent on account of the failure of the Chaco campaign (war with Paraguay), quarrels among political parties and deportations, as well as commercial and economic pauperism, originated the revolt."

"It was also reported that the government ordered into exile several revolutionaries and the death penalty for others, especially members of the army."

The dispatch said normally prevailed now with the government in control.

REED PREDICTS CHAOS UNDER DEMOCRATS

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—Warning that a "band of men" in Washington is "seeking covertly to change our course as a nation," Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, enunciating his platform for re-election, charged today "America is being fed poisons from which it will take decades to recover."

"In the name of national recovery, the present administration has launched the country on a course which, unless soon checked, may well carry us over the brink of inflation to complete chaos," he asserted.

One of the outstanding conservatives in congress, Reed criticized what he described as the government's efforts to "increase the power of the central government, and to substitute for individual initiative a governmental control of agricultural production and of all business activity."

He reiterated his determination to "support the president when he is right and oppose him when he is wrong."

Among Reed's opponents for the republican nomination is Pennsylvania's governor, Gifford Pinchot.

WILY "SASQUATCH" IS BEING STALKED BY TWO STUDENTS

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 8.—(AP)—America's first sasquatch-catching expedition headed into the mountains of British Columbia today on a hunt for the horrible, hairy, naked bogeyman of Indian legend.

J. F. Blakeney and C. K. Blake, brothers, of Sacramento, medical students at the University of California, read reports of frightened tribesmen that the giant baby-snatcher of old had been seen recently in the mountains north of Harrison lake, and determined to attempt to photograph or lasso a "sasquatch."

The fabled sasquatch, as described in Indian lore for hundreds of years, is about as villainous a phantasm as ever frightened a little papoose anywhere, but adult Indians also are fearful of the monsters.

They are supposed to lurk in caves and glades of British Columbia, coming out in the twilight to peer moodily into Indian tepees, to glower and snatch at children, to steal food, play diabolical tricks and even kill warriors.

BURLESQUE TROUPE FINDS BRIDGEPORT KIND, NOT "TOUGH"

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 8.—(UP)—Bridgeport, considered one of the worst "show towns" in the east, has won a new reputation by aiding a New York burlesque company.

Theater-goers not only put on a show for the burlesque company, but took up a collection in Bridgeport restaurants and night resorts to assure them transportation back to New York.

Due to financial difficulties, the show's sponsors withdrew at the last moment. The musicians and stagehands quit just before curtain time. Frankie Moore, prima donna of the show, made a curtain speech, promising that the show would go on if men in the audience would volunteer to serve as stagehands, and if some one could play the piano.

The stagehands were soon organized. A volunteer pianist and banjoist stepped forward. The show went on. When the financial returns were checked, it was found that $300 still was lacking to meet the bills.

A collection was taken up in the audience and when this still fell short, the collectors made the rounds of the town's late spots and made up the balance.

Blake, brothers, of Sacramento, medical students at the University of California, read reports of frightened tribesmen that the giant baby-snatcher of old had been seen recently in the mountains north of Harrison lake, and determined to attempt to photograph or lasso a "sasquatch."

The fabled sasquatch, as described in Indian lore for hundreds of years, is about as villainous a phantasm as ever frightened a little papoose anywhere, but adult Indians also are fearful of the monsters.

They are supposed to lurk in caves and glades of British Columbia, coming out in the twilight to peer moodily into Indian tepees, to glower and snatch at children, to steal food, play diabolical tricks and even kill warriors.

BURLESQUE TROUPE FINDS BRIDGEPORT KIND, NOT "TOUGH"

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 8.—(UP)—Bridgeport, considered one of the worst "show towns" in the east, has won a new reputation by aiding a New York burlesque company.

Theater-goers not only put on a show for the burlesque company, but took up a collection in Bridgeport restaurants and night resorts to assure them transportation back to New York.

Due to financial difficulties, the show's sponsors withdrew at the last moment. The musicians and stagehands quit just before curtain time. Frankie Moore, prima donna of the show, made a curtain speech, promising that the show would go on if men in the audience would volunteer to serve as stagehands, and if some one could play the piano.

The stagehands were soon organized. A volunteer pianist and banjoist stepped forward. The show went on. When the financial returns were checked, it was found that $300 still was lacking to meet the bills.

A collection was taken up in the audience and when this still fell short, the collectors made the rounds of the town's late spots and made up the balance.

MARKET SAFE RESISTS CRACKSMEN'S EFFORTS

Burglars Sunday entered the New York market, 16 North Broad street, by jimmying a rear door after climbing down a fire escape from an adjacent building, and knocked the combination off of the safe without being able to open the lock-box, according to police reports.

A grocery store next door at 12 and 14 North Broad was entered through a rear basement door, but so far as could be learned nothing was missing, according to police reports.

The drugstore of E. T. Parramore, 906 Dill avenue, S. W., was entered by burglars who broke a glass in the front door to obtain cigars, cigarettes, fountain pens and watches, police were told.

DATA FOR HEARING ON FISHING ABILITY PREPARED BY F.D.R.

MIAMI, Fla., April 8.—(AP)—President Roosevelt took today off on his southern fishing cruise to prepare the data for tomorrow's investigation by White House correspondents of his fishing ability.

The yacht Nourmahal still clung to its position during the bright sunny day off Anguilla island. It will weigh anchor in the morning to keep an engagement to meet the correspondents setting out from here early tomorrow.

The meeting place will be on the high seas.

The president did send back to White House headquarters here today a proclamation fixing May 1 as Child's Health Day, and also an executive order transferring to the civil service commission the duties vested in the veterans' administration pertaining to the administration of the civil service retirement act and the Canal Zone retirement act.

The Child's Health Day proclamation was in response to a request made by congress in 1928.

"The welfare of the nation," said the proclamation, "is vitally affected by the health of its children, and the promotion of the best physical and mental development of the children is an essential part of the social-health program of the nation."

Mr. Roosevelt asked all official and voluntary agencies interested in child welfare "to unite upon that base in the observance of such exercises as will result in a deeper realization by the people of the necessity for the protection and promotion of the health of the nation's children."

G. O. P. TO OFFER AIR MAIL MEASURE

Three Republican Senators Seek To Restore Contracts Immediately.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—Legislation to require restoration of cancelled air mail contracts pending settlement of Postmaster General Farley's charges of fraud and collusion will be proposed tomorrow by three republican senators—Austin, Davis and Barbour.

Their bill will be offered as a substitute for the administration's permanent air mail measure and will, the Vermont, Pennsylvania and New Jersey senators said today in a joint statement, fix future compensation for carrying air mail at two mills per pound mile, provided a government subsidy to encourage development of commercial aviation and recognize that "competitive bidding is not adaptable to the situation."

Air mail legislation is expected to be taken up by the senate as soon as the tax bill is out of the way. The postoffice department has asked for bids on a temporary basis under terms requiring the complete reorganization of private companies whose contracts were annulled, but has intimated that if permanent legislation were enacted in time the temporary service would be abandoned.

The three republicans said today regarding competitive bidding: "In the words of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker 'to ask anyone of these companies to bid on another route is as impracticable as asking the New York Central railroad to bid to carry mail over a route such as the Santa Fe system.'"

Austin was a member of the Black air mail investigating committee. Davis and Barbour are members of the postoffice committee.

Wirt's Charges Are Denied By Member of Brain Trust

The United Press in the following interview with Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson presents the first direct reply from a member of President Roosevelt's "brain trust" to the charges against it by Dr. William Wirt.

By JULIUS FRANDSEN. (Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(UP)—Speaking from a year's experience in the Roosevelt "brain trust," Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson tonight vigorously denied Dr. William Wirt's charges that "radical" professors control administration policies.

Every idea advanced by the president's advisers must be proved sound and workable or it is tossed into the discard at once, Dickinson told the United Press. Theories must be backed up by concrete evidence.

"Mr. Roosevelt's trial and error method is distinctly practical and abandons any line of approach which does not prove its soundness by results," the 38-year-old former law professor explained.

Dickinson warmly defended the recovery program, asserting "its good results as a whole are obvious and constitute its justification."

Wirt, the Gary, Ind., school superintendent who has been subpoenaed to appear before a special house committee Tuesday to name alleged "red" plotters among the "brain trusters," has declared that NRA is impeding recovery.

Dickinson believed the great diversity of opinions among the "brain trusters" was sufficient in itself to show that there could be no concerted effort by them to swing the government toward communism or any other doctrine.

"As far as concerns professors in politics, there are as many different kinds as there are of lawyers and businessmen," he said. "Some are progressive; some reactionary. Some have limited experience; some have broad and practical experience in business and other fields."

"As far as I am concerned, any theoretical or doctrinaire approach to the depression, whether by professors, lawyers or businessmen, is unsound and opposed to the point of view of the president."

Dickinson is among those who have combined scholarly attainments with practical experience.

Holder of many degrees, member of Phi Beta Kappa and former teacher at Amherst, Harvard, Pennsylvania and other universities, he also has been a law partner of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, democrat, California, and has directed many business surveys.

With all the data of the commerce department's far-flung statistical agencies at his fingertips, Dickinson an-

DAVIS NOT TO ATTEND ARMS GROUP MEETING

LONDON, April 8.—(AP)—Special United States Ambassador-at-Large Norman H. Davis decided today that his presence is not required at Tuesday's meeting of the disarmament conference steering committee in Geneva.

This does not preclude, it was learned, the possibility that a summons will be issued for a full disarmament conference on May 23. This is the date Arthur Henderson, president of the conference, considers advisable after consultations with the British and the French.

WILEY POST SETS AMBITIOUS GOALS FOR 1934 FLYING

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 8.—(AP)—The Daily Oklahoman in a copyrighted story says Wiley Post, stocky globe-circling record holder, has fixed for his twin goal in 1934 a new airplane altitude record and the winning of the international air race from London to Melbourne, Australia, next October.

Post has invested thousands of dollars and more than 18 months of engineering and experimental work in the new ventures.

The intrepid flyer's new program will continue to team Post with his veteran flying companion, "The Winnie Mae" of Oklahoma.

Post's objective will be to better the world's airplane altitude record of 44,819.418 feet, held by G. LeMoine, of France. In the second, the international air race, he will be matched against the world's greatest pilots in ships built especially for the race.

"Post's plans are so revolutionary and so far advanced, it is hard for process his plans is reported capable of a speed in excess of 300 miles an hour at 28,000 feet, due to a rarefied air and lack of resistance."

FATE OF LOST AVIATOR SOLVED BY WRECKAGE

PONTIAC, Mich., April 8.—(AP)—Mystery surrounding the fate of Alonzo Layman, 27-year-old aviator, who disappeared on December 19, while flying from Pontiac to Detroit, was solved today with the finding of fragments of the plane on the Lake Erie beach 10 miles north of Monroe, Mich.

Coast guardsmen were asked to search for the fuselage, in which, it is believed, Layman's body probably will be found.

PECORA REFUSES JOB AS N. Y. INVESTIGATOR

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—Ferdinand Pecora tonight declined to serve as special counsel to the New York state senate judiciary committee in its investigation of correspondence said to have been exchanged between Senator Warren T. Thayer and utilities companies.

Pecora said he was forced to refuse the appointment because of a lack of time.

NEW LEADS FOLLOWED IN 'MASSACRE' SLAYING

BREMERTON, Wash., April 8.—(AP)—Two new developments, closely guarded by authorities, were being followed today by Kitsap county officers in their efforts to solve the slaying of two women and four men at Brland's Point 18 days ago.

Sheriff D. L. Blankenship said the new "leads" were the "most significant" yet uncovered and was hopeful some definite clue pointing to the slayers would result. He said, however, he could make no announcement at this stage of the quest, as it was necessary to work under cover.

The bodies of the six victims, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flieder and their four guests, were found mutilated in the Plunder beach home a week ago last Saturday. It was believed they had been killed 48 hours before the murders were discovered.

"A MOTORIST NEEDS TO WATCH HIS NERVES, TOO, MR. TILDEN"

W. E. Richards, Jr. of Lansford, Pa., who rode nearly 20,000 miles in his car last year, says:

"I'm a real tennis fan, Mr. Tilden, and I know it takes healthy nerves to play championship tennis year after year. But don't forget, it takes healthy nerves to drive a car, too. Trying to see your way in blinding fog or rain...skids...other drivers taking quick, unexpected turns—all are enough to give any man 'traffic jitters'. And yet driving never bothers me a bit. Smoke? I'll say I do. Morning, noon, and night. But I stick to Camels because then I know I can forget all about nerves. And Camels sure taste great!"

William T. Tilden, II, seven times world tennis champion and winner of countless other titles, says:

"Tournament play in tennis imposes a terrific strain upon the nervous system. Healthy nerves are essential if a player is going to be successful in maintaining his speed, endurance, and the psychology of victory. As a steady smoker, I find that cigarettes vary a lot in their effect upon the nerves. I have tried all the other popular brands, but for years I have smoked Camels. Because of their extraordinary mildness I know that I can smoke Camels as freely as I wish and still have healthy nerves."

How Are YOUR Nerves?

Jittery nerves are everywhere in modern life. You know them by such signs as these—foot-tapping, key-rattling, nail-biting—frowning and worrying.

If your nerves are not all they should be, study your habits that might affect them—your eating, your sleeping, your recreations. And get a fresh slant on your smoking by starting on Camels.

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCO than any other popular brand.

Camels never get on your nerves. You can smoke one after another...with increasing enjoyment. Camels are so mild, so delicate—packed with the pleasure of finer, costlier tobaccos! The more you smoke them the more you'll like them.

HOLC BONDS GUARANTEED.

The action of congress in guaranteeing the principal as well as the interest of the bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will have immediate effect in speeding the relief being extended by this agency of the federal government to the owners of distressed property.

Heretofore the holders of many mortgages have been reluctant to accept the bonds of the corporation in exchange for their mortgages, because, while the interest on the bonds was guaranteed, the principal was not. As a result, the bonds have never been quoted at par, dropping one time to as low as 80.

It has been evident for several weeks that congress would pass the bill guaranteeing the principal, and, as a result, the bonds have climbed steadily until they are now quoted at 99. They will undoubtedly now go to par and stay there.

The bonds are acceptable as collateral by all member banks of the federal reserve system and their value is further increased by the fact that as the loans by the corporation are paid in installments, the value of their security is increased.

The objection heretofore made that the bonds are not guaranteed no longer applies. The HOLC will, accordingly, be relieved of the necessity of devoting a large amount of its time and effort to induce an exchange of mortgages for bonds, and will be able to concentrate on the issuing of loans.

A recently released summary of the loans completed by the corporation discloses that this federal agency, after having gotten off to a somewhat slow start, is now functioning in an efficient and effective manner.

Including both the homes which have been refinanced and those on which foreclosure proceedings are being withheld pending action by the HOLC, it is estimated that direct relief has been extended to approximately 2,500,000 urban home owners and their immediate families, with thousands of new applications for relief being received every day at the offices of the corporation in the various states.

The corporation did not begin to function on a nation-wide basis until early in October because of the time necessary to set up headquarters in each state, with two or more representatives in each county in the country, but in the six months from that time to March 9, 1934, loans, amounting to $325,151,720, were made by the exchange of the bonds of the corporation for mortgages on the verge of foreclosure, or by the cash loans made in a small number of cases.

In addition, the immediate danger of foreclosure has been averted by $40,000 other home owners who have been found eligible for loans, whose property has been approved, under preliminary appraisal, for security, and whose mortgages have agreed to accept the bonds.

In Georgia, it is reported by George W. West, special representative in charge of the work of the HOLC in the state, that 2,474 loans have been closed, with a value of $5,231,528, of which the Atlanta district accounts for 1,501 loans, representing $3,314,905. Mr. West reports that the high-water mark in loans made in a single day in Georgia was reached during the past week, with 85 loans, totaling $144,000, being closed on Wednesday.

No such huge total of home financing has ever been witnessed in the United States, the combined business of all of the building and loan and other mortgage agencies falling, even in the days of easy money, far short of the daily average of loans now being closed by the HOLC.

The relief extended by the HOLC is not limited to the home owners, as the receipt of negotiable bonds in place of the mortgages on which little or no revenue was being received, has undoubtedly brought widespread relief to embarrassed mortgagors.

The immensity of the task faced by the corporation made necessary the creation of a huge organization, covering every community in the country. In addition to the state headquarters, employing from 200 to several times that number of appraisers, lawyers and clerical workers, there are 244 field offices and at least one attorney and appraiser in each county.

In the closing of each loan the corporation must take into consideration the interest of the home owner, the mortgageholder and the government. In many cases, the mortgageholder must agree to a reduction in the principal of his loan to meet decreased value of the property, and each home must be carefully appraised, taxes and insurance paid, necessary repairs made and titles run.

It has been manifestly impossible to pass finally on all of the 1,031,349 applications that have been filed with the HOLC to date, a fact largely responsible for the somewhat widespread criticism to which the corporation has been subjected.

The report of its first six months of 'nation-wide operations reveals that it is now in full stride and well on the way to the consummation of its tremendous task of extending relief to every eligible home owner whose property was threatened with foreclosure.

EDUCATIONAL IDIOTICIES.

Just as individuals go crazy, so, at times, do groups, institutions and even governments. It is perhaps a strange anomaly that no phase of government has a worse record for having departed from the path of sanity than education.

In recent years radicalism—and, in some instances, downright idiocy—has supplanted common sense and progressive policies, until now most of our schools are cluttered with useless frills, foibles and furbelows.

The acme of this senseless cramming of minds still in the formative period with a hodge-podge of "instruction" of a character to be of little or no benefit in the meeting of life's problems, is contained in the announcement that Kansas University has established a "course" in fly fishing, for completion of which academic credit will be given.

This step illustrates the extent to which educational leaders are willing to go at times in the search for new subjects in which to "train" the modern student.

It is not surprising that the New Orleans Item is led to comment that the Kansas University fly fishing course is in keeping with the opportunities presented to "ambitious young Americans who have earned 'credits' from our universities by preparing theses on lost motion in dishwashing, and by mastering the mysteries of paperhanging and plastering."

It is high time for the educational leaders of the country—or, if they will not, the responsible heads of government—to call a halt to the experiments being resorted to in the name of "education."

It was not necessary to teach such things in the training of the Websters, the Jeffersons, the Ben Hills, the Alex Stephens and the other master minds whose profound knowledge and clarity of vision contributed so much to the well-being of the American government and the American people.

The immature mind can digest just so much and no more. When a boy or a girl is forced to spend many hours a week learning the intricacies of "fly fishing" and the like, he or she will be able to assimilate less information on subjects vital to a sound and useful education.

When such foolish courses are added to the curriculum of an institution of higher learning, there is constant temptation to the average student to take these courses instead of others more difficult but of greater value in the preparation for life's battles.

The sooner our educational leaders and the parents of our school children and college students wake up to the folly of the frills and furbelows under which education is being smothered, the better it will be for the youth of the country.

"Never kick a hog before killing it," advises the Montana State College. Yes, you'll never know in what form of meat he will return to give you indigestion.

They have cut the hours down on all jobs now to such an extent it is very inconvenient for a man to go to sleep on the job.

There are two kinds of people: Those who are preying upon honest, industrious folks and those who are praying for them.

Then there's the man who has quit bragging on his ancestors since he saw a picture of his grandfather with handlebar mustache.

Now that robbers have begun holding each other up, it appears banditry has reached the saturation point.

Comment at the Capital

Congress Leaders Mark Time on Important Matters Pending Roosevelt's Return.

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, April 8.—President Roosevelt may not be fighting his battles in the White House, but he is drifting along, trying to compose differences on pending legislation, but realizing that in the final analysis no important items will be reached till the chief executive gets back.

Mr. Roosevelt, and he alone, can decide what shall be done about the Wagner bill—re-employment labor disputes by enforcing various rules upon the employers, but not upon the employees.

Up to Chief.

Mr. Roosevelt, and he alone, will say what shall or shall not be the final scope of the stock market regulation bill.

Mr. Roosevelt, and he alone, will decide what sort of amendments shall be made by the present congress to the securities act, which has failed to permit capital markets to be revived and the heavier goods industries to aid in the re-employment drive.

Mr. Roosevelt, and he alone, will say what the future scope of the NRA is to be, now that it is clear that General Johnson is to be head of the housing corporation and to have only a supervisory interest in the future development of the codes.

It might seem from the foregoing—and it is by no means an all-inclusive list of major questions pending—that the government has ceased to function in the absence of the president on the high seas.

But the truth is, Mr. Roosevelt is giving congress a chance to function without him. Few people realize what a difference it makes when a leader can telephone the White House and find out what the president thinks about a particular provision in a bill that is causing dissension in the ranks, or when the same leader, who does not telephone the president, discovers that a brain trust has told somebody that he understands the president's wishes are so and so.

Needed Rest.

Too many hectic hours have been spent lately on Capitol Hill trying to keep step with the president and the various quirks of the new deal so as not to be in the position of embarrassing the chief in the executive mansion. One almost suspects that in prolonging his vacation, Mr. Roosevelt slyly recognized that there were many more advantages than in simply getting a vacation for himself.

Serves Notice.

There is not the slightest disposition in congress to be concerned about Mr. Roosevelt's vacation; in fact, in republican, as well as democratic circles, the fact that the president needs the rest is conceded.

But when the head of the new deal comes back, he will find that, while congress has made progress on certain measures, nothing really vital will have been passed.

The trend is a bit more realistic than it has been in a long time—not because the right is any more right than it has been in a long time importance of getting business and labor working more effectively together and moving the whole recovery machine ahead without trying to reform the world at the same time is being understood more widely today than several months ago.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY

WHY THE POLITICIANS RUN THE HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

The administration of public health is subject to the whims of the political boss in every burg in Yankeland from Hicksville on the Hudson to Hot Dog City, Cal. With every election the political boss of the territory ately turns out the incumbents of the better berths in the health department and puts deserving "workers" in their places. Public health is a solid A matronage racket for the politicians as is the conduct of our prisons everywhere in this crooked country.

A woman whose husband works in a foundry asks whether fumes from coke are poisonous. At the foundry they have used heaters all over the plant this past winter, burning coke and having no pipe or flue connection to carry the fumes out of the workroom. Her husband suffers constantly from splitting headache, and so do many other workmen employed there. The woman thinks it is against the law, but her husband says it is not. The law inspectors are not here once a month and if it was against the law the inspectors wouldn't allow it.

Naive, the dumb cattle are about these matters, fellow capitalists? Now if the graft-ridden town where this condition exists were blessed with a plain unbelieved health officer, he would have the fumes of the one who has made Rochester, N. Y., famous—this good woman would never have thought of writing to me about the matter. She would have reported it to the local Dr. Goler, and he would have had stovepipes on those furnaces or stoves in short order or the owners of the plant would have found themselves in serious trouble.

Of course any such heaters, no matter what fuel is burned in them, must have stovepipes to carry the products of combustion out of the room.

A coke fire, a coal fire, a kerosene or oil burner, a gas stove, or even a wood fire may give off the deadly odorless carbon monoxide gas or fumes if there is a closed or insufficient draft or if there is any leak in

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON.

BUZZ-SAW WASHINGTON, April 8.—The reason behind Huey Long's current antics is not hard to find. Mr. Roosevelt decided some time ago that Huey was a bad man to mix up with, either as a friend or an enemy. So he and Postmaster General Farley worked things quietly around so Senator Pat Harrison would be their chief consultant on Louisiana patronage. Harrison is from the adjoining state of Mississippi.

Nothing was said about the matter, but Huey began to catch on weeks ago, when more and more appointments went against him. One very important federal job went to a Mississippian. Long has received nothing.

SNUB There is a cloakroom understanding among senate democrats to ignore Huey, no matter what he says or does. The agreement is the result of what happened to Harrison and Bennett Clark. The other day they undertook to chastise Huey and found out what every burned child already knows.

As one democratic senator wearily explained to his colleagues in private: "The trouble about debating with Huey is that you cannot call him anything he has not already been called."

Huey himself expressed something of the same idea when he publicly told Harrison and Clark not to get mixed up with porcupines, unless they wanted some quills in their hide. Other senators used other animals in the same metaphor.

The result is Huey is going to have immunity in congressional debate hereafter. The boys are afraid of him.

RAILROADS The inside on the rail strike situation is that the labor unions are engaging in tactical maneuvers.

They are holding out because they have nothing to lose. It is three months yet before the 10 per cent wage cut agreement expires. They have all that time in which to hold out for better terms, without any serious consequences.

The reason Rail Administrator Eastman threw up the sponge was that he discovered that situation and became disgusted. He had the operators fairly well in line, but he could not budge the unions.

PROSPECTS None of the manipulators believes there is going to be a strike. There cannot be. The law provides many steps yet before we even get up close to one. The labor boys are acting as if they really meant it. By threats and grimacing they may be able to wheedle out a new agreement for, say, a 5 per cent cut. Most observers believe that what is really more important is a better wage for the low-paid employees outside the union.

What will happen is this: When Mr. Roosevelt comes back, he will invite the labor boys in. He will have a difficult time with them. A swift agreement is hardly in prospect. Some concessions will have to be made by both sides.

UNEASINESS The republican progressives are showing inner signs of mild discontent with the administration.

You can see it backstage in their senate group. With the exception of Senator Norris, they generally have refrained from publicly joining the New Deal. They have played a cagey game, co-operating quietly, but always leaving the gate open so they could get out if they wanted to.

Their mail lately has led them to believe their farm constituents are doing a lot of heavy thinking. Farm clubs have been organized in some districts to read the Congressional Record at night. Their business constituents are the little fellows, some of whom have been complaining about the NRA.

They are safe for the present, but some moderation of AAA policy may have to be made to keep them in line.

HARBINGER When Senator Borah leaps to the attack, you know spring is nigh. Borah keeps his ear to the ground better than any other congressional tactician. His criticism of the NRA campaign was the first break away from the New Deal. It led the way for this current wave of criticism.

The postman says Borah's mail is running from 200 to 300 letters a day, which is more than he ever before received.

NOTES Congressman Wadsworth's friends now believe he will not run for governor of New York, because it is a needless chance to take. In view of his prospects for the republican presidential nomination.

Democrats here concede privately that Governor Lehman is not as strong a candidate as they would like to have.

Bankers are making life miserable for Jesse Jones by mail and telephone. Because his National Bank of Commerce, at Houston, Texas, is 80 per cent liquid. It will hurt his campaign to make other banks solidify their liquid condition by making commercial loans. Jones' excuse is that he had nothing to do with the management of the bank, but his name is signed to the 80 per cent liquid report.

Congressman J. Buell Snyder, from a western Pennsylvania district, will try a novel campaigning idea. In a few weeks, before the primaries, he will get an airplane to take himself and several of his congressional colleagues up to his district. He will take them around the district in the airplane, making speeches.

A strong force behind the move to amend the securities act is Mrs. Roosevelt's good friend, Congresswoman Greenaway, of Arizona. She is thinking about mining stock rather than the White House.

Speaker Rainey is adopting Garner tactics in the house, rushing bills through before the representatives have a chance to object. He got 100 minor bills through the other day.

If a Friend's Loan Is Unpaid, the Forfeited Collateral Is Friendship

By Robert Quillen

One of the most trying ordeals in the common experience of mankind is the business of saying "no" to a friend.

When a friend asks you for a favor, he places you under an obligation to grant it. He would not ask it if he thought you would refuse. His request, therefore, is a compliment to your generosity. To deny it is to refute his good opinion.

But that is not all. By asking a favor he has placed himself at your mercy. His defenses are down. By speaking one word you can humiliate and shame him.

He knows that, yet he trusts you not to abuse your advantage. His self-respect is wagered on your chivalry.

But there is another side of the story. Let us suppose that the favor he asks is the loan of your property—a vase, for instance, valuable and easily broken.

The act of borrowing pledges return of the thing borrowed. Though no word is spoken, the borrower says to you: "I shall return this as it was when I got it."

That is not a mere declaration of intention.

It is a statement of ability. It says, in effect: "If anything should happen to this property of yours, I am able to replace it."

That unspoken assertion must be part of the agreement, for certainly you would not lend willingly if your friend should say: "If this vase is broken, it will be your hard luck."

Now suppose the loan is made. Your friend departs with the vase and drops and breaks it on his own doorstep. And too late you discover that he is unable to replace it or pay you its value.

How completely he has ruined himself! He has broken his word. He has confessed that he obtained your property under false pretense. He has shown himself unworthy of your friendship. And, worst of all, since he so lightly risked losing your friendship, he has shown how little he valued it.

To all of this you expose him by your weakling inability to say "no". There is but one safe rule for borrowing: Borrow nothing you can not replace; borrow nothing whose value you cannot afford to lose.

Born 50 Years Too Late

Hollywood in Person

By MOLLIE MERRICK

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., April 8.—The informal evening coat made of charming fur is one of the sensations of the spring mode in cinemaland. Lillian Bond has been the first to popularize this mode, with her coat of white kidskin cut with the most informal atmosphere in the world and carrying a cat bow of black moire ribbon.

The collar is just a series of fur loops through which the ribbon slips. It may be lowered and the ribbon allowed to hang loosely if fur about the throat proves too warm.

With this coat Lillian Bond wears a formal gown of black satin which relies on bias cut and perfect female form divine for its tremendous chic. Her hair is done in a very informal manner when wearing this informally formal coat. A coronet braided gives the tiara effect without the presence of jewels in the hair.

Miss Bond says it is important to carry out the line but that diamonds would be all too much with such a costume.

Turn your hat up all the way round and let your face get brown if you want to be in the swim this summer. Hollywood says the "silly sailor" will hold its own with all the other modes. Silly sailors came into being shortly after the vogue for crazy hats was declared an inalienable part of the spring makeup.

If you have that early summer tan that only a session at Santa Monica or a flying trip to the Bahamas, Bermuda or Palm Beach will give you, get into ice blue or linen blue.

Let your summer sports frock be split down the back from neckline to waistline and let that lobster red back peep through. It's chic. And don't forget it.

The cooler the color, the more dramatic your sun-kissed body. The more aloof the fabric, the more intense your palpitating skin with its fresh sunburn. And when you turn that brown that beauty oil eventually makes you, nothing in this world is so lovely as ice blue or linen blue to set off your chic.

Elizabeth Allan is a fine exemplar of the peacock train mode. Developed in dead white crepe—which emphasizes her nut brown body—the train which is cut round at the base, is ornamented with a series of tiny ruffles which give it that peacock swing.

A softly-ruffled cape falls from the shoulders. The back is entirely bare, but huge draped sleeves that fall almost to the waist dramatize the top of this dress.

Services From Midnight To Dawn
Mark Greek Easter Observance

By ROBERT BUNELLE.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Greeks of the Orthodox churches sang "Kristos Anestes" (Christ is Risen), and celebrated their Easter Sunday in ritual and feasting after the manner of their forebears.

In the churches of the larger Greek communities, services began at midnight and lasted until dawn today. After these famous gatherings in their homes for lamb barbecues and rounds of social calls, shouting as a greeting to visitors, "Kristos Anestes."

The date of the great Orthodox Easter differs from that of the other Christian churches because of a difference between the Gregorian and Julian calendars and the custom of basing of lamb dates from the time when the Greek Christians were scattered into the hills to become shepherds as a result of the Turkish massacre. Each family held its own ritual and barbecued a lamb then.

For several days, preparations have been made for the Easter feasts. First of all, the lamb is roasted in a large pot, and the family who silt the skin and inflated the lamb to make the skin easier to remove.

At dawn Sunday, the lambs were placed on long spits, rubbed with a 90 or from 60 to 80, did not backslide later on. Usually the contract required that the pupil should shoot the stipulated score at least three times. But after that it was up to him and further case histories of such subjects probably would show that they presently fell into their old faults and became the dubs that nature and perhaps Providence intended them to be.

No Business Golf was a grim game to the successful businessman in the goody era. He accumulated a great lot of expensive trash in his locker at the club and his catch-all closet at home, all of it purchased in simple hope and abandoned in slow despair. He was almost willing to believe that even the cut of his bloomers could have some effect on his stroke. He persuaded himself that the golf course was a great place to talk business because golf was so humanizing and then went out and hammered his golf ball all over the patch so that the only moments when he found himself within sailing distance of the other man were when they teed off and again on the green. And of those moments they were both too intent on golf to discuss anything else. After that there was the nineteenth hole, but they probably got tired and sang "Sweet Adeline."

There was a type of golf pupil who might be described as a mental case.

His trouble was in his mind, not in his stroke. For such as that Mr. Costello sometimes used psychology. He would hand the afflicted one a box of new balls and tell him these balls had been doped by a secret process and would fly straighter and 50 yards farther. Sometimes it worked.

The golfers are wearing plain slacks and plain short socks now. Their shirts are just white and their sweaters of solid color and not pale blue, either. I do not believe our captains and pillars have given up golf, but none are paying from $1,000 to $5,000 any more to have their scores reduced 10 strokes.

CHARACTER-BUILDING IS URGED IN SERMON.

Need of character building in youth was emphasized Sunday in a sermon by the Rev. H. C. Hale, minister of the West End Church of Christ, on the subject, "Young People and Some of Their Problems." Mr. Hale said that "it isn't always the things we do, rather the demoralizing effect they have upon us later, which causes them to be wrong."

Mr. Hale outlined how friendship and environment affect the moulding of character and the shaping of destiny, and discussed the importance of young people of today as the nucleus of tomorrow's civilization.

TRIAL OF CANNON WILL OPEN TODAY

Bishop and Secretary
Face Court in Connection
With 1928 Activities

WASHINGTON, April 8.—(AP)—Against the background of the 1928 presidential campaign, Bishop James Cannon Jr. and his woman secretary face trial tomorrow in criminal court here on a charge of violating a federal election law.

After a ruling by Justice Peyton Gordon on a preliminary defense motion, the Methodist churchman and Miss Ada L. Burroughs, the secretary, must answer to the indictment that they conspired to omit reporting all campaign contributions they received. The maximum penalty is two years imprisonment or $10,000 fine, or both.

The subject matter of the indictment is more than five years old. The indictment itself was returned two and a half years ago and stands shorn by the United States supreme court of eight counts that charged specific violations of the corrupt practices act, under which it was drawn.

The overt act alleged is that report was made of only part of contributions to the anti-Smith movement totaling $65,500 by Edwin C. Jameson, president of a New York city insurance company.

Miss Burroughs, as treasurer of the anti-Smith movement headquarters at Richmond, Va., reported $17,300 of the Jameson contributions in February, 1929. The defense claims there was no legal requirement for reporting the remaining $48,200, asserting it was spent within the confines of Virginia by the state anti-Smith committee. Cannon was chairman of the headquarters committee and assisted in the administration of the state committee.

The government proposes in the trial to place before the jury the story of the movement against Alford E. Smith in the south from the Asheville (N. C.) meeting at which the fight was planned to the filing by Miss Burroughs of her last report with the clerk of the house of representatives.

Dr. Arthur J. Barton, Wilmington (N. C.) Baptist minister, who joined Cannon in organizing the Asheville meeting, will be the first government witness. He has been called for Tuesday. Jameson and E. J. Armbruster, a justice department assistant, are principal government witnesses.

"Advice to Lovelorn"

Pleasantly Amusing

"Advice to the Lovelorn" featured this week at the Rialto theater, is surprisingly good entertainment. Surprisingly better than anticipated because, while its plot is closely in line with one or two pictures that have preceded it, it is a new and original role, brings a refreshing newness to its interpretation.

The story you probably know familiarly. It is the story of the star reporter who, because of failure on a big story, is punished by being put in charge of his paper's column of advice on matters of love and marriage. Can't quit because of a contract. How is it that reporters in pictures are always cluttered up with contracts?

The story, this time, is involved with a fiancée who doesn't like the

Georgia Fields And Streams

By H. A. Carter.

There is always one and the same gladness of April. There has never been a spring since my memory nor probably since the coming of the white man to the shores of this continent, that thoughtful individuals en masse did not descend on the forest and completely strip as many dogwood trees as they could comfortably or uncomfortably bring to get out of the woods. These people may have been thoughtless, but this is true or false, the net result of their actions is pure destruction. The descent of the vandals on Rome left no such waste, for a few pieces of man-made artifacts; whether or not these were ever replaced I have never taken the time nor interest to look up. There were few roads, and at wide intervals. Yet there never passes a spring that hordes of actual vandals do not drive out into the countryside to break down all the dogwood that their gasoline buggies can hold. The branches are tied on benders and fenders, next to the hood and over the spare tires. The delicate blossoms are lashed to the motor heats up, and a veritable blast of hot air cooks the blooms beside the hood. Curling streams of dust come from the unfortunate flowers so decoratively draping the spare tire or trunk rack. Home is reached. A few leaves are left on the branches, and maybe a wilted blossom. "That's all," murmurs the "nature lover" and despatches Junior to place the frayed limbs in the garbage can; limbs which, had they fulfilled their destiny, would have filled the moonlit nights of late April with an unearthly beauty to delight the souls of gods.

For all that, though, I cannot deny of you the right to pluck branches of dogwood. The next time you have a desire to get dogwood, I know one place where it is very abundant, and I am sure that the owners of the property will not mind any more than the farmers do when you break down their trees. If you live in Atlanta, drive out to the Leon avenue road, until you come to Briarcliff, Oakdale, or Lullwater road. Turn left down any of these streets, and drive until you see a great mass of dogwood blossoms. It won't matter if it is on the lawn of a magnificent home. The owners will be glad to have you strip the tree. If they see you, they will only smile and say, "Go on, it is to help yourself. After all, aren't you just as welcome to their blossoms, and have you not just as much right to their trees as they have to all that you can see or find? You are. There is no unclaimed land in the boundaries of Georgia. The owner may be more remote from the land in some cases than others, but the plants that grow on it are his, and if you take them without his permission there is just one word to apply to you and that is "thief." You are a lovely word, and most of you are above such a thing in anything else in the world. But the tender beauty of that dogwood makes thieves and vandals of most of our otherwise respectable citizens. Save the dogwood. It is much more widely sold than cut. If you save it now it will be there when you break it, it will eventually be gone beyond recall. Save the glory of Georgia's April wilderness.

BIG INCREASE SHOWN IN SPANISH IMPORTS

MADRID, April 8.—(AP)—Spain imported approximately $15,000,000 worth of goods in February, as compared to $9,500,000 worth in February, 1933, official statistics revealed today.

Idea of being wife to a newspaperman—who could blame her? So she tries to persuade Lee to take a job in her father's garage. But Lee is offered $1,100 a week to plug cut-rate cosmetics in his column (he couldn't get away with it in a real newspaper)—his advertising department would object. And then inferior drugs from the same store cause his mother's death and he goes out looking for vengeance.

How it all works out satisfactorily you must see for yourself. The girl in the case, while Sterling Holloway contributes delightful comedy. The Rialto also has a color musical short and a Mickey Mouse you'll find good added value for your admission price. —RALPH T. JONES.

ARGENTINA WILL GET LARGER WHEAT QUOTA

Nation's Special Difficulties
Under London Agreement Recognized.

ROME, April 8.—(AP)—The United States, Australia and Canada, it was learned reliably tonight, have recognized Argentina's special difficulties under the London wheat export agreement and are willing to grant her a larger quota for 1934-35 than had previously been set.

At the call of the Argentine delegation, representatives of all four countries met tonight at the hotel of Tomas A. Le Bretton, the Argentine delegate to the meeting of the international wheat advisory commission.

Canadian and Australian delegates discussed the Argentine situation this afternoon among themselves. It was learned that these two exporters will adopt the same attitude as the United States, namely that Argentina should be given a more generous quota on the grounds, first, that she signed the London agreement when the crop was poor, and second, that since then she has developed a surplus of 45,000,000 bushels.

A further ground is that Argentina's acreage increase has not been so extraordinary as that of other countries such as Canada and Australia.

The Argentine representative did not directly tell the commission his country would be forced to leave the conference if a larger quota is not granted, but such was understood to be the impression conveyed.

Expansion Continues in Business As '34 Moves Into Second Quarter

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

NEW YORK, April 8.—(AP)—Industry and commerce have moved through the first week of the year's second quarter with volumes still expanding.

Increased purchasing power derived from extensive wage boosts, and spurting of the urge to buy by rising prices, have inspired high hopes of continuance of commercial gains at least well into this second "three-month" period of the year, despite the normal tendency toward recession in the weeks leading up to mid-summer.

The automobile industry continued to lead the procession. According to the week ended March 31 was reported at 608,443 cars, off only 19 cars from the previous week, and nearly 22 per cent from the like week of last year, and nearly 12 per cent from the like period of two years ago, although 119,409 cars under that week of 1931. Changes from the previous week disclosed a moderate recession in merchandise shipments, which was offset by a larger movement of coal. Moody's seasonally adjusted index of carloadings was advanced 2 of one point to 63.8 per cent of the 1925 average, whereas a recession in loadings is expected for the last week of March.

But electric power consumption continued to make the best showing of these statistical barometers. For the last week of March, the total was 1,665,650,000 kilowatt hours, a seasonal gain of 7,801,000 over the previous week, which boosted Moody's seasonally adjusted power consumption index by .8 of one point to 108.1 per cent of the 1925 average.

At any rate, the recent lull in output production appears to have been checked, for the moment, at least. The American Iron and Steel Institute last week placed iron output at 43.3 per cent of capacity, off 2.4 percentage points from a week previously, but the trade expects the estimate to be made tomorrow to show an increase.

Retail trade generally continues to hold its gains, despite the expectation of some letdown after Easter, according to Dun & Bradstreet. Wearing apparel continues to move in gratifying volume, and the demand for housewares, hardware and spring merchandise generally is active. Wholesale, who have recently been experiencing some seasonal curtailment of buying reported a substantial broadening of business in the past few days.

Among the more basic business barometers, freight car loadings have held up well. The volume for the week ended March 31 was reported at 608,443 cars, off only 19 cars from the previous week, and nearly 22 per cent from the like week of last year, and nearly 12 per cent from the like period of two years ago, although 119,409 cars under that week of 1931.

Heavy contracting of steel by the automotive and other steel consuming industries developed last week, stimulating the steel industry's estimate last week placed iron output at 43.3 per cent of capacity, off 2.4 percentage points from a week previously, but the trade expects the estimate to be made tomorrow to show an increase.

Peanut Oil Paralysis Treatment Found Beneficial, Says Carver

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., April 8.—(AP)—Dr. George W. Carver, negro scientist, told an audience here tonight that "beneficial" results had been obtained in treating victims of infantile paralysis with an oil made from peanuts.

The negro, head of the science department here, said "We are seeking a cure for infantile paralysis and we feel hopeful. I do not say that we have found a cure, but we are hopeful."

One Georgia patient who was given massage treatments with the oil which Dr. Carver announced some time ago he had discovered, showed a thigh growth of one and a half inches, a calf growth of three-fourths of an inch and an arm growth of three-fourths of an inch, he said. Another patient, the negro scientist said, had a withered leg restored to apparent normalcy under the treatment.

Dr. Carver explained several grades of the oil were used in treatment of infantile paralysis and anemia because some are too heavy for the spines of certain patients to absorb and others too light. He spoke at a trustees' program beginning ceremonies which will end tomorrow with a Founder's Day celebration commemorating Booker T. Washington.

He also exhibited a road paving block which he had compounded of cotton and asphalt. He said it made superior roads and would wipe out the cotton surplus. It contains 1-2 per cent cotton.

Dr. Carver, he explained, applies the oils by massaging them into the skin so they are absorbed through the veins, energy, strength and weight builders.

8 VOLUME EDITION
PLANNED FOR WORKS OF GEORGIA AUTHORS

MACON, Ga., April 8.—(AP)—The board of directors of the Washington Memorial library here next Wednesday will consider a plan proposed by friends of Harry Stillwell Edwards, Macon author, to compile his complete works, including a $10,000 prize novel, into eight volumes.

Should the board approve, the library will sponsor the movement and begin work immediately on the compilation.

Lending publishing houses will cooperate if sufficient demand for the bound volumes is foreseen, it was said. Mr. Edwards himself will assist in compilation, he has assured leaders in the author's works include several novels, scores of short stories and a large group of poems.

The famed prize novel, "Sons and Fathers," and another, "The Marbeau Cousins," were best sellers, and two of his short stories, "Aeneas Africanus" and "The Tenth Generation," have sold in the millions of copies.

COTTON TRADING DECIDEDLY DULL

NEW ORLEANS, April 8.—(AP)—

The volume of trading in the cotton market was decidedly moderate during the past week, and there were periods of extreme dullness.

While the Easter holidays were in a measure responsible, the main cause of the hesitation was the slow progress of legislation at Washington, particularly the delay in finally disposing of the Bankhead cotton control bill. At the same time, talk of further inflation and the possible renunciation of silver, was a somewhat supporting influence.

While prices eased off moderately in the early trading they were steadier later, owing to the strength of the spot market and the talk of inflation.

The extreme spread of 20 points and the recovery near the end of the week resulted in a small net gain for the period of 5 to 6 points compared with the close of Saturday last.

The market followed rather closely the fluctuations in the stock market, but one of the main supporting influences was the strength of the spot situation. Spot middling traded fully 20 points above May contracts and the May position at one period of the week showed a difference under July of only 6 points.

While the weather was more favorable for crop preparations except for some heavy rains at the end of the week, traders were disposed to withhold judgment as to the final acreage owing to the delay in the final enactment of the Bankhead bill and the largely increased purchases of fertilizer in the southern cotton states reported during the week.

The spot demand was fair and spot prices ruled firm with the high week. The demand came both from domestic mills and from European buyers. The market took somewhat less than heretofore.

The exports for the week were slightly more moderate and under the corresponding week last year, but the total shipments for the season to date were only 45,000 bales under the corresponding period last year.

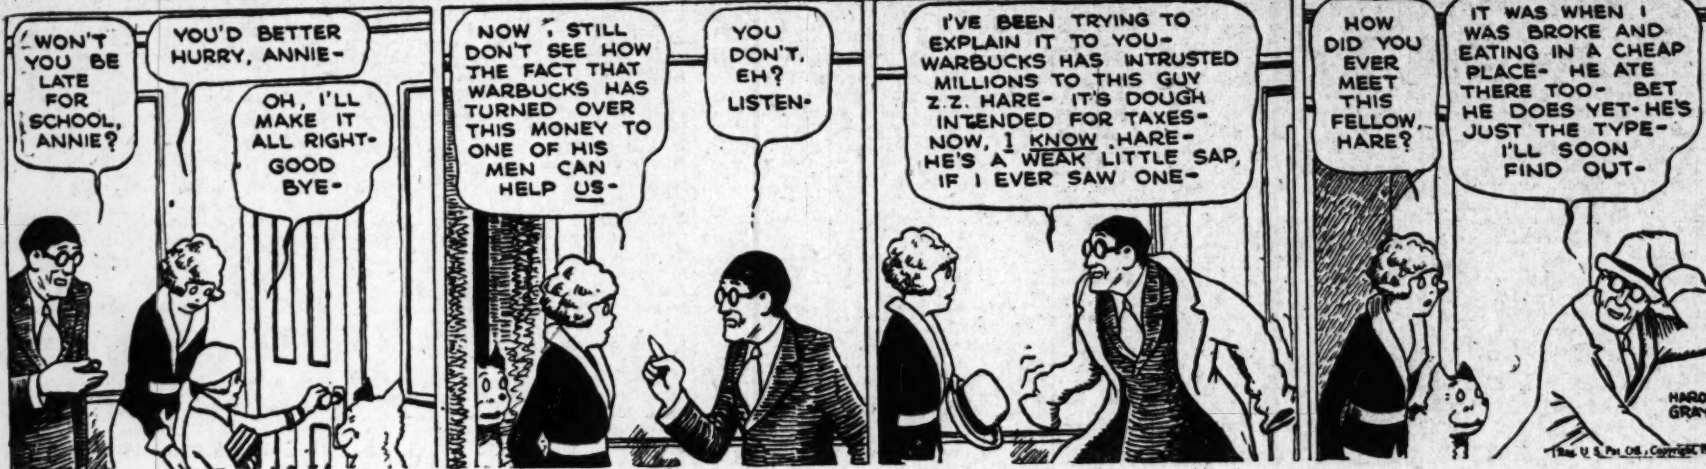

The following shows the high, low and closing sales in the New Orleans futures market during the past week compared with a year ago:

THE WILD BIRD

BY OWEN JOHNSON

INSTALLMENT II.

“Mid-Victorian?” she said, frowning. “Say it.”

“And why not? You young girls are so almighty scared of being taken for a lady. All your time is taken up in a desperate attempt not to look on as a lady. No wonder it’s the girls nowadays who run after us men.”

“You can hardly say that of me, Uncle Ed,” said Barbara, amused at his sally.

“No, no, of course not. Well, what do you know about the great event? You know? Of course, you know, her again, isn’t he wonderful? He’s the only one who doesn’t know that we all know about Evangeline’s engagement.”

“Have you heard who he is?”

“Certainly! He’s John Alden Bradford Cabot something or other. The last name doesn’t matter. Tony’s running around in circles because he doesn’t know if Laurie’s bringing up six or sixteen men. The new literary idol, Rance, I believe, is coming up.”

“Gregory Rance?” said Barbara eagerly.

“Why Barbara,” said Ed Chippingway, with mock seriousness. “Does your father know that you read such nonsense as this?”

She reflected a moment before answering: “They impress me as being free of cant, tremendously lived.”

“As a matter of fact, you’re right, but don’t try one on your father,” he added, laughing his dry cackle. “But if you do, I just want to be present. Hello, here’s the train now.”

Barbara moved down, as the waiting room door opened and slammed, while late arrivals, struggling out of their automobiles, crowded the platform. The evening train, as though puffed up by the remarkable fact of being on time, came roaring under the trestle bridge, making as much noise as possible, and ground to a stop.

Tony Chiswick, undecided between the three parlor cars, kept moving back and forth, bumping into every one and apologizing profusely. The platform was crowded with persons trying to distinguish one another in the dusk, hallooing, shaking hands, sorting out luggage. Barbara, pressed back by the crowd, was seeking vainly for her father, when all at once her eyes were attracted by a burly musketeer figure in a loose overcoat and a shabby hat, who was shouldering his way through the confusion towards her.

The next moment he loomed over her, hat off the squared head, stretching out a big hand.

“Laurie’s sister, aren’t you? I’m Gregory Rance.”

“The Gregory Rance?” she exclaimed.

“And all that sort of thing,” he said abruptly, looking down at her from the gray aquiline eyes that were set deep under the eyebrows. “Well, we’ve got the lucky man safe in hand.”

“But I am not Laurie’s sister.”

DIDN’T YOU SEE THAT SIGN—NO HELP WANTED?

WELL, I’M NO HELP TO ANYBODY!

Paul du Chailu.

People enjoyed reading the book and listening to the talks, but some of them said, “He must have made up these tales. It is too much to believe that he saw big, hairy animals in the forests and jungles of Africa.”

Other men, however, reported that they, too, had seen gorillas in Africa, as well as other sights reported by Du Chailu.

Later in his life Du Chailu returned to Africa and spent two more years in exploring. After his return from “You’re not?” he said in a deep, chested roar.

She shook her head, smiling. A man’s man, evidently.

“Well, who are you, then?”

He looked at her intently, thinking what extraordinary eyes.

She hesitated only a moment.

“Barbara Brawne.”

He registered the name, searching her face. Then all at once, their glances meeting, they began to smile.

“Well, we’ve met, any way,” he said, holding out his hand because he was curious to feel the contact of her again. “And you introduced us. I like it this way.”

She gave her own instantly. Had she withheld it or resorted to flippancy he would have passed on. As it was he stood looking down at her, pleased and a little puzzled, thinking: “Everything is said by the first look in the eyes, the sound of the voice and the touch of her hand. All the rest is superfluous.”

Presently, without releasing her he said abruptly: “Hello. A queer idea just came into my head. May I tell you about it some day?”

He broke into a chuckle. Then with apparent irrelevance he added, “Queer, you know, because I don’t like women.”

“And you liked me?”

“At once.”

She smiled.

“Like to startle people, don’t you?”

“Not in the least,” Barbara’s hand, laughed his rumbling, full-chested laugh and turned away.

Through the sifting crowd a little man about five feet three, in pepper and salt cutaway, square boots, square gray derby, stiff shirt, and stiff Gladstone collar was approaching. A big chest, thin, birdlike legs slightly bowed, a head like a gourd, where the rye, loose cheeks hung like empty valises, horn-rimmed spectacles sunk on the nose that was sharp and bent inward. It was his father. She went to him and drew her arm through his. He never kissed her in public.

“Who was that you were talking to?” he asked immediately.

“That was Mr. Rance—Gregory Rance, the writer, you know. I brought your overcoat. Put it on.”

The footman, Rance, came up to them, about them, sprang to the box and they rolled away.

“What are you looking at?” he asked, noticing that she had turned her head.

“Feminine curiosity,” she replied frowning, for she knew that she was in for the usual cross-examination.

“Evangeline’s fiancé came up on the train. You know Uncle Tony is announcing the engagement tomorrow night.”

“Evangeline? That baby?”

“She’s almost 20, father.”

“Twenty, a mere child!”

She knew the purport of the remark, but as she was in no mood to discuss she remained silent.

The flaring headlights of the motor swept past them. They turned at the square and went down the great main street where the high tracery of the elms cut black against the risen moon. At the Chiswick mansion the door was open and she saw the lights streaming across the lawn as the guests were clambering out.

“Where did you meet the fellow? What’s his name, Rance? You never mentioned him before the high tracery of the elms cut black against the risen moon. At the Chiswick mansion the door was open and she saw the lights streaming across the lawn as the guests were clambering out.

“Now for it,” she thought. To tell the truth would be to prejudice him at once. She said aloud with an air of indifference: “He’s cousin Laurie. I’ve never met him before.”

“You were talking to him as though you knew him.”

“He was watching me,” she thought, stiffening. “Of course, I was interested in meeting him. I adore his books.”

“Oh, you do?”

“Is he going to marry Evangeline?” She saw a way out.

He cleared his throat, relaxed, and said: “Everything all right in the family?”

She gave him the budget of news and the weekly weather report.

He drew her arm through his.

“You’re looking uncommonly pretty.”

UNCLE RAY’S CORNER

IN AFRICA WITH DU CHAILU.

1—Settling a Quarrel.

Paul Du Chailu, early explorer of west-central Africa, was born in Louisiana in 1837.

When only 18 years of age, he sailed from New York to West Africa; and after four years amid the wilds of the dark continent, he returned to the United States. Crowds of people came to hear him give talks on his adventures, and he wrote a book about them.

this journey, he wrote other books—part of them intended for boys and girls.

In the Apingi country, south of the equator, Du Chailu declared that he had been made king and was known as “the spirit.”

One day he heard a great uproar in the village where he was living, and was told that the natives wanted to attack another village. Du Chailu asked what was the trouble.

“There is a young woman,” he was told, “who has come here to marry one of our men. In her own village they want her to marry someone else who does not like.”

The white man said that they must not make war for such a reason, and sent word to the other village for the leading man to come to talk with him about the affair.

Since the request was refused, Du Chailu got his warriors together and set out to march to the other village. When he was near it, he fired a gun into the air. The noise of the shot made the people run away, but they were called back, and proved willing to talk about the question.

A very old man had been asked to buy the girl from her parents, in exchange for two slaves, three goats, five spears, three knives and other presents.

Du Chailu managed to patch up the trouble, and the girl was allowed to marry the man of her choice.

WILLIAMS OFFERS QUALITY PRINTING, THOROUGH SERVICE

Rhodes Building Concern Prepared To Insure Work of Real Value in Large or Small Orders.

Quality, variety and service, the standards first in demand by business concerns in ordering printed material, are combined to make the Williams Printing Company, whose plant is located on the third floor of the Rhodes building, 78 Marietta street, one of the most popular concerns of its type in the city.

It is at once apparent that to be able to express one's wants when placing an order for pieces of printed matter or any of the many items connected with illustrating and printing, is to avoid delay and misunderstanding, to save money and otherwise contribute to the mutual benefit of buyer and seller.

The Williams Printing Company, with its staff of long-experienced, technical, practical and trustworthy employees, offers a service to the buyers of printing and advertising that has proven of real value in the past to countless Atlanta concerns who desire, through distinctiveness, a positive reaction on the part of the ultimate recipient of the printed piece.

The buyer of printed matter is assured that his order, regardless of its size, will be given personal attention and that every detail will be executed with a view to achieving as nearly as possible the desired effect.

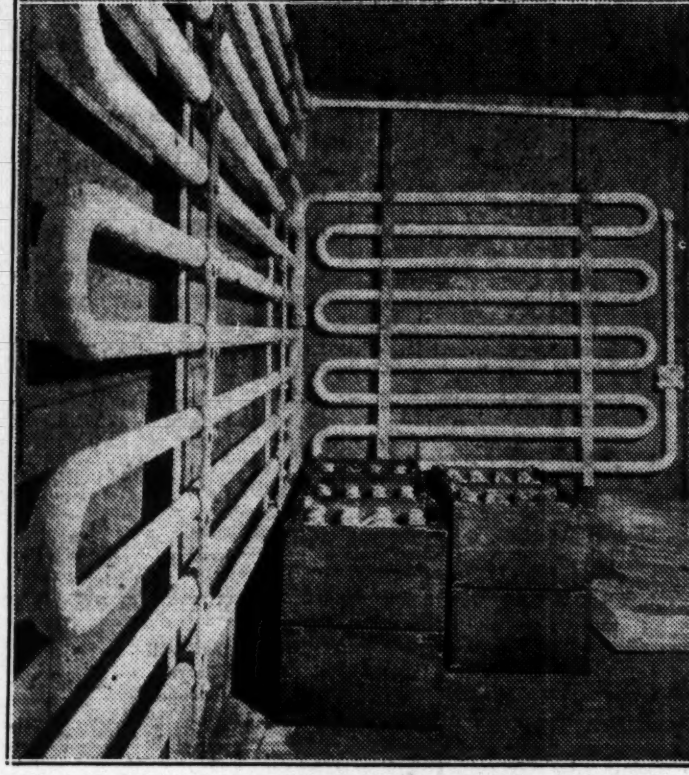

In the planning and producing of the printed piece, many a dollar can be saved by the purchaser provided he exercises care in the selection of his printer, in order that he may avoid waste of time, undue expense and effort on a poorly executed piece of matter.

This concern is enjoying a steady growth through "A SERVICE"—that which includes the proper style, layout, color combinations, ideas from which he may make a selection as a basis on which to work or to aid in developing an idea of his own. Everyone appreciates the advantage of original and specially designed printed pieces over the stock design or unillustrated printing.

The plant of the Williams Printing Company is one of the most complete in the city of Atlanta. Modern, high-speed machinery, together with its complete composing room, having the latest of type faces, assures a perfect "made-to-order" finished printed product.

The businessmen desiring quality printing of any type is invited to confer with Jesse Williams, or with any of his associates, and to investigate the diversified service offered by the Williams Printing Company.

Brownlee & Lively Dairy's Milk Produced Under Strictest of Sanitary Regulations

The freshness, absolute cleanliness, purity and wholesome quality of its products, maintained through many years of service to hundreds of Atlanta homes, have built for the Brownlee & Lively Dairy, on Briarcliffe road, a host of staunch friends.

Brownlee & Lively Dairy milk is produced under the most sanitary conditions possible, and every safeguard is provided to insure its purity.

Realizing that cattle, like human beings, must have the best of care if their productiveness is to be kept at its highest level, the Brownlee & Lively Dairy has constructed a modern sleeping "hotel" for its herd of Holstein and Jersey cattle, where they may be kept at night and during inclement weather.

Twice daily they are carefully bathed and cleaned thoroughly with a special deodorant, disinfecting and antiseptic solution. Employees also are required to exercise equal hygienic care against possible contamination of the milk.

In the accompanying photo (upper left), the milk is shown being double strained as it is run through the chilling process to keep down the bacteria. To the right, employees are shown bottling the milk by the use of special equipment. During its entire process, Brownlee & Lively's milk is never touched by a human hand.

In the lower photo, part of the day's supply is shown in a specially constructed and refrigerated storage room, where it is kept until delivery to the consumer. Delivery frequently is made within two hours after milk-

FINANCING ADVICE OFFERED CLIENTS BY ROBERT LOSE

Institution Prepared To Foster New Construction and Modernization Through U. S. Aid.

The Fulton County Federal Savings & Loan Association, with offices at 100 Hurt building, is prepared to foster construction and thus increase employment by lending aid to the prospective home builder as well as to the home owner desiring to modernize his property, according to Robert G. Lose, president of that institution.

"It is the adopted policy of the association's board of directors," says Mr. Lose, "to take the fullest advantage of its position as a government chartered institution to aid, as far as possible, those wishing to build or to modernize their homes."

Since it is chartered under the home owners' loan act of 1933, Mr. Lose points out, the Fulton County Federal Savings & Loan Association is privileged to obtain considerable additional working capital by selling its shares to the United States treasury.

This association's directorate has determined to do, using these additional funds to foster construction and thus put many otherwise unemployed persons to work in this most constructive manner.

These funds, Mr. Lose points out, will not be limited merely to the building of new homes, but will be equally available for repairs, renovations and additions to existing homes.

"It never has been the association's policy," he declares, "to be a party to loading the home owner with a burdensome debt. On the other hand, we will lend our aid toward working out for him his home-owning problem on a basis that will fit his income. Thus he may be assured of gaining the maximum value for each dollar he invests, leaving him with one payment to make each month on a definite program to clear his home of debt."

There is an established and accepted percentage of the cost of a home that the prospective owner should have in hand before attempting to buy or to build, Mr. Lose asserts. This factor, he adds, has been grossly violated in years past and has been the cause of so much distress among the home owners.

"It is the desire of the Fulton County Federal Savings & Loan Association," declares Mr. Lose, "to help our citizens in working out their home-building programs on the accepted basis. Thus they first should save to build, then they may be in a position, with these savings plus the loan we would make to him to build to save by buying with 'cash on the barrel'."

In its new Hurt building quarters, the association is prepared and equipped, both from a financial and from an executive standpoint, to be of invaluable service to the prospective home builder. These services are extended a special invitation to visit the association's offices and consult with Mr. Lose or his associates on the multiplicity of problems which attend the financing of a new home or modernization of an existing one.

Atlanta Tent and Awning Company Urges Color to Enhance Beauty of Home Property

Color, as expressed through bright awnings, are doing much to increase the attractiveness of countless Atlanta homes, according to J. D. Couch, manager of the Atlanta Tent and Awning Company, whose headquarters for manufacturing, sales and service, is located at East Point.

Awnings are "reflecting a strongly increasing flow of public confidence in returning prosperity," according to J. D. Couch, manager of the Atlanta Tent & Awning Company, "which maintains manufacturing, sales and service headquarters in East Point."

Color in home surroundings—one of the most positive of all means of expressing not only one's individuality but one's faith in the future—is far more in evidence this spring, he adds, than in many months.

With his finger upon the pulse of business, and knowing of the rapidly developing popularity of the distinctive 1934 awnings, Mr. Couch warns of delay in ordering their installation and urges that spring orders be placed early so that the home owner may gain the full benefit of them throughout the spring and summer months.

It is easy, Mr. Couch asserts, to merely think of awnings as a means of shutting off the merciless glare of the summer sun, but only by seeing the Atlanta Tent & Awning Company's completely new line of materials, embracing an enchanting variety of blended stripes and figures, can one visualize the vast service an awning may render in relieving the severe exterior lines of a home.

If awnings served no other purpose but this, he declares, they would be worth every cent of their cost in enhancing the beauty of a residence.

With their new, modern stripes and exotic, modern designs, in flashing, modern colors, they beautify as well as protect.

Mr. Couch calls attention to the fact that first impressions of a home are made by its exterior, and that first impressions are the lasting ones.

"If your home, outwardly, is cold, formal and forbidding," he asserts, "your friends will find far less pleasure in visiting it than if it greets them with a dash of colorful 'bright awning' in a hearty welcome."

Awnings, says Mr. Couch, serve a variety of purposes in their varying forms. Whether used over bar doors, windows, terraces, porches or in the garden, they provide cool sanctuary from the sun's burning rays and welcome shade after work or play in its glare. With awnings, a terrace or an open porch may be transformed into a restful outdoor living room or sewing room, where one may enjoy every stirring breeze in perfect comfort.

"Color is the vogue," declares Mr. Couch, "accepted, endorsed and enthusiastically promoted by the arbiters of fashion."

To satisfy this demand for more color, the Atlanta Tent & Awning Company this year has selected a wide variety of shades and hues which, properly blended, will transform the drabbed home into a thing of beauty, and properly equipped with awnings, give it a note of distinctiveness that will set it apart from its neighbors.

The company is equipped to build, fit and install scores of different types of awnings, each designed for its own individual type of residence or building. The Atlanta Tent & Awning Company's products are styled to completely harmonize with the architecture and to so merge, line for line, with the structural peculiarities that they conceal its shortcomings and add beauty and dignity to the severest lines.

In this connection, Mr. Couch calls special attention to the distinct service offered by the company's experts under the direction of A. Ponder, superintendent of the service department, through which such problems of construction defect are being solved daily by the proper installation of awnings.

He invites the home or building owner to feel free to ask Mr. Ponder's assistance with such problems.

The company, says Mr. Couch, is enjoying a constantly increasing business with building owners and shop keepers throughout the city, and invites consultation at any time on the outfitting of any building with decorative awnings. No downtown office is maintained by the company, he states, but the services of an expert are available at any time upon call.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Momentarily the blade flashed; then it was buried in the body of Sheets. The cat, screaming from pain and rage, redoubled its effort to dislodge the creature clinging to it in the embrace of death; but again the knife fell. Then, his great voice forever stilled, the panther sank lifeless to the ground.

A truck containing 41 cases of beer ran into a tree near Jonesboro Saturday night and on Sunday Mr. Lee came up from Cordele and applied to Sheriff Adamson for permission to trundle it off. It seems the beer was consigned to him and that as far as he knew it was the 3.2 per cent beverage that is being sold pretty generally hereabouts.

Sheriff Adamson thanked Mr. Lee for his visit, advised him that the beer was of an alcoholic content of 1 and 10 per cent and served notice on him to appear in court at Jonesboro this morning to answer a charge of violating the state prohibition law. Mr. Lee said he would appear.

A man identified as H. D. Green, the driver of the truck, was taken to the Atlanta hospital Saturday night after the accident and admitted for treatment of a dislocated hip and severe cuts about the face.

DALLAS, Texas, April 8.—(UP)—Raymond Hamilton, former associate of Clyde Barrow, denied by mail today that he accompanied Barrow and Bonnie Parker when three machine gunners killed Constable Cal Campbell and wounded Police Chief Percy Boy at Commerce, Okla., last Friday.

Clear Day Is Forecast After Gloomy Sunday

Fair weather will be enjoyed by Atlanta today, together with moderate temperatures, the United States weather bureau predicted Sunday night as a storm moving eastward to the north of Atlanta passed on after lightly flicking this city with its southern edge, bringing 15 of an inch of rain Sunday afternoon.

"General indications are good for mostly fair weather for Monday," the weather man said. "Temperatures probably will range from 68 to 78 degrees, as compared with the 68 to 74 degree range recorded today. The northwest wind velocity is picking up, and the barometer is showing signs of rising."

MAN CLAIMS BEER IN WRECKED TRUCK, MUST FACE COURT

A Mr. Lee, of Cordele, Ga., whose initials Sheriff Adamson, of Jonesboro, could not recall, ought to be able to put in a claim as champion trouble borrower of the year.

A truck containing 41 cases of beer ran into a tree near Jonesboro Saturday night and on Sunday Mr. Lee came up from Cordele and applied to Sheriff Adamson for permission to trundle it off. It seems the beer was consigned to him and that as far as he knew it was the 3.2 per cent beverage that is being sold pretty generally hereabouts.

Sheriff Adamson thanked Mr. Lee for his visit, advised him that the beer was of an alcoholic content of 1 and 10 per cent and served notice on him to appear in court at Jonesboro this morning to answer a charge of violating the state prohibition law. Mr. Lee said he would appear.

A man identified as H. D. Green, the driver of the truck, was taken to the Atlanta hospital Saturday night after the accident and admitted for treatment of a dislocated hip and severe cuts about the face.
